Mrs. Perham Wins F&H Week Honor

Three farmers and three homemakers were honored Tuesday night by being recognized as Maine's outstanding farmers and homemakers. The occasion was the annual recognition banquet, a highpoint of Farm and Home Week at the University of Maine.

University President Lloyd H. Elliott presented recognition certificates to Helen Wright Gay, Farmington; Roland Vincent, Buck, Corinna; Stanley Hayes Blanchard, Cumberland; Hazel Talbot Leavitt, Turner; Mary Slattery Perham, West Paris; and Rex Lindsay Varnum, Sebree.

The citation read by President Elliott before the presentation of the certificate to Mrs. Perham follows:

"Mrs. Mary Slattery Perham, you and your husband chose farm life as the ideal setting for raising a family of thirteen children whose health, self-discipline and education have been the major achievements of your life.

"As a mother, you have placed emphasis on education and self-sufficiency as major goals of your children and their diversified occupations pay tribute to your training and interest. They have become successful teachers, homemakers, accountant, salesman, patent inspector and design engineer. Another son is in the Navy and three of your children are still students. Your accomplishments as a mother were recognized in 1961 when you were Maine's Mother of the Year. As a homemaker, you excel in preparing and serving nutritious, well-balanced meals to safeguard the health of your family. Much of your food is raised and preserved at home.

"You have been a member of the Extension Association since 1934, serving as 4-H Club leader for eight years. You were also a foods leader for six years and are now chairman of the Emergency Feeding Program and Citizenship Committees.

"You are also a member of the Grange, Eastern Star and the women's organizations of your church in which you also serve as a Sunday School teacher.

"In behalf of the University of Maine, Mrs. Perham, I am honored to present you with this certificate recognizing you as an Outstanding Homemaker."

COMMENTS FROM THE TOWN MANAGER'S OFFICE

There has always been a considerable heat loss at the Town Garage due to type of construction and lack of proper insulation. Work has started this week on dropping the ceiling so that it will not be necessary to heat so much wasted space. Insulating material will be added, so that in the future heating costs should be considerably reduced, particularly when the doors on the west end of the building are removed and replaced by a cement block wall. This set of doors are of no value to the building, and have not been opened for more than five years.

Serious consideration is currently being given to trading the Trojan loader for a new machine. Prices and information on five different makes have been received, as well as an estimated allowance on the old loader. Financially the town is in relatively good position to trade as the balance in the truck rental account at the end of March has reached the all time high of $10,002.34.

Mention has been made this past winter of the possibility of revising the fire insurance coverage on all town owned buildings. The new policy is now in effect with the result that the coverage has been increased from $217,300 to $281,646 with no increase in the annual premium. Instead of having seven or eight policies in as many different companies, it is now all combined under one blanket policy.

Sincerely,
Harold L. Bean

The Floyd Verrills had company from Massachusetts over the week end.

Robert Chadbourn was a recent caller on Bryce Yates.

Read I Corinthians 9:19-27

Then said Jesus unto his disciples, If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me. (Matthew 16:24.)

One of the ways into which the cross leads us is the way of self-discipline, both physical and spiritual. "It is that discipline," writes Dr. James Reid, "which comes through the denial of bodily instincts and appetites. There can be no fitness either of body or spirit without self-discipline."

There is a young man whom I have known since he was a boy. He developed into a fine athlete, and achieved considerable success as a runner. When I talked with him about his fitness for his racing, he told me of the luxuries he avoided and of his abstinence from all kinds of self-indulgence. Severe discipline was his secret of success.

We cannot be faithful witnesses for Christ unless we accept the necessary discipline. Ministers and laymen alike must discipline their minds and souls for the purpose of being at their best in living the Christian way of life.

PRAYER: Thou knowest, O Lord, that we want our body, mind and spirit to be useful instruments in Thy service. Grant us the power of self-mastery. Enable us to discipline ourselves so that we may be fit for Thy service. For Jesus' sake. Amen.

Thought For The Day
Cultivation of the spiritual life demands self-discipline.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR...

Greetings to Parents—circa

G. A. '36—or thereabouts: It has just occurred to me that we might profit by forming an Un-Intelligensia Obvious Society—like the A. A. or Weight Control; i. e.—misery loves company.

This thought arose as I was replacing volumes A (Air, Aerodynamics, Astronomy, Atmosphere); B (Barometric pressure); C (Cosmic Rays); I (Ionosphere); M (Meteorology); E (Exosphere) [No luck!]; R (Rockets); S (Science, Space, Space Medicine); W (Weather), and my carefully bound Annual Supplements.

After hours of patient reference and cross-reference with my 8th grader, I learned that neither our Americana nor World Book Encyclopedia contained all the necessary information for an assignment. It was to be found in a paperback book on Science, available at the drug store for $1.00.

Since a similar thing happened not too long ago in Social Sciences (History and Geography to us), my attitude toward any book salesman in the future will be negative.

Not only do these well informed encyclopedias not contain the words of the Canadian National Anthem—neither are the pictures of State and National flags large enough to show the conscientious student the difference between the antlers of the moose (Maine flag) and those of a deer. (Fortunately, I am familiar with these animals and could portray a fair facsimile); nor the serpent (Mexican flag) large enough to see what color its eyes are.

Small wonder our world is in its present state of affairs; in my generation is grossly uninformed!

Do you recall that in our grade-school days there was always a state of confusion? In the fifth grade we were out three teachers!—two in the seventh grade; but the sixth grade was best/worst—we had four! The first teacher lasted about two hours daily—then collapsed in tears. The next teacher was the extreme opposite—her discipline was bolstered by a steel-edged ruler. But the pendulum had swung too far, so she didn't last long. After a third temporary replacement, we were put in our proper places, willingly, by a small but extremely efficient Miss Cooper. Remember her?

The seventh and eighth grades were about as hectic. How on earth we ever absorbed enough to enter High School I'll never know!

Our only subjects were Reading and Spelling (we sounded out new words using "long" and "short" vowels and a system known as phonetics). History, Geography, Penmanship, (taught by our regular—when she was regular—teacher)—page upon page of up and down strokes and circular across-the-page strokes done to the tempo of the teacher's "one-two-one-two"; and last but not least, Arithmetic. No sign of any English system—just fundamentals and problems which found our parents wanting, because they, too, solved them by a system other than that expounded by the teacher. I never could figure what difference it made what method was used as long as the end result was correct. What may seem logical to one person may be confusing to another. My Dad had a practical system, using a dollar as either 100% or 100/100, depending on whether we were dealing with percentages or fractions. One dollar was a whole. I suppose this is not feasible today, since any five year old knows a dollar is not a whole any more.

My gripe is not (entirely) with the efforts of our educational system to offer our children a broader program of learning. However, I do feel that a student should not be graded on material that is, (1) not explained in full by the teacher, (2) not readily found in school textbooks or resources available in the average home or (3) time should be set aside in school for all pupils to take advantage of specifically named resources at the school. In short—a child should not be penalized for being unable to buy every $1.00 book put out on every conceivable subject every year.

Actually, teachers are my favorite people (after kids). Each year we blithely go along with their demands for increased wages. The average local wage-earner doesn't get enough either, so are ashamed to protest. But teachers should appreciate that due to increased demands, the parents are going to be hard pressed to earn the extra money to pay for increased taxes (in fifteen years ours have increased just about 300%), and will have less time to help with homework. Only increased efficiency justifies increased wages.

Do I dare suggest that students be confined to the mental age level of the student? I sometimes get the crazy notion that in our frenzy to prepare kids for higher learning we lose our perspective. To use a simile: it's like expecting a four-month baby to be housebroken because he will have to be by the time he goes to school.

Another thought—entirely irrelevant—just some to me—prompted by a caption in a recent publication "We Waste a Million Kids a Year"—"the kids who...become drifters, rejects and outsiders."

Many mothers work as domestics or in factories to supplement the family income.

How about placing kids—no longer in school—in these jobs? We expect them to be adult scholars, why not in family responsibilities?

Exploitation? Maybe! But there are many days I feel we are being exploited by our kids!

How a Shell research team got 168.47 miles per gallon

A Shell research team drove this car to a Mileage Marathon record. They used the same Shell fuel that could be bought at Shell stations.

168 miles per gallon must be a world record. Here's how the record was made—and how a quiet marriage of careful driving and today's Super Shell can help you get better mileage.

SOME years ago, a group of Shell scientists had a friendly argument. The gist of it: who could get the most miles from a gallon of gasoline. They decided to find out. And Shell's Mileage Marathon was born.

All contestants had to use the same gasoline anybody could buy at a Shell station. Beyond that, the Marathon had few rules. And ingenuity ran wild.

How the record was set

Here are some of the things that Dave Berry and Fred Schuette, the winning team, did to set their record.

1. None are recommended for informal marathons. But they do offer a few clues on how to get more miles per gallon.

- Berry and Schuette removed their engine cooling fan to save power and muffled their radiator to retain heat.
- They used tires worn smooth and pumped up to 50 pounds pressure to cut rolling friction to a minimum.

- On the road, they accelerated to 20 miles per hour, cut the ignition and rolled until speed dropped to 5 miles per hour. Then they repeated the cycle.

NOTE: they used a standard carburetor from an old one-cylinder engine.

Since "on-and-off" driving is illegal on public roads—and since most Marathon modifications are dangerous for normal use—you may wonder if Shell's Mileage Marathon had any point.

Indeed it did. In the months of preparations, every contestant learned a bit more about the care and feeding of automobiles. Knowledge of this sort gets passed along to you in the form of better Shell products for your car.

EXAMPLE: As a result of Shell's research studies, including many mileage tests, one of the 9 ingredients in today's Super Shell is a mileage-booster called Platformate. This ingredient alone can release up to 8 percent more energy per gallon than the finest 100-octane aviation gasoline. Result: extra mileage.

To help boost mileage even more, follow these driving tips from Berry and Schuette.

How you can save gasoline

1. Don't race your engine when standing still. Unnecessary engine speed is pure waste and takes you nowhere.

2. Avoid jackrabbit starts. Fast getaways waste gasoline and power.

3. Drive at moderate speeds. Your car uses about 25 percent more gasoline at 65 mph than at 45 mph.

4. Keep an even speed. Ragged driving uses extra fuel—without taking full advantage of the power it could generate.

5. Pace yourself in traffic. Don't be the fastest or the slowest. You'll just be trapped into wasteful spurts and slowdowns.

6. Keep tires up to their proper pressure. Soft tires can soak up power.

7. Ask your Shell dealer about these checks: Spark timing should be set correctly. Fuel filters and air cleaner should be cleaned regularly. Brakes should be properly adjusted. And your cooling system thermostat must work right.

Motorists who follow these rules, and use Super Shell, can expect good mileage. Chances are, you can improve the mileage you are now getting. Now that you know how, why not give it a try?

A number of local families will be interviewed in a new sample survey to be known as the Quarterly Household Survey which the U. S. Census Bureau inaugurated on April 2.

The primary purpose of the Quarterly Household Survey is to meet increased government-wide needs for additional current population and housing statistics. The increased need for survey data resulted in a workload which could not be handled by the Bureau's monthly Current Population Survey which collects information on employment and unemployment as well as related population and housing statistics.

Two to four subjects will be covered each quarter in the new Household Survey. The initial survey will collect information requested by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, U. S. Dept. of Labor, for a detailed study on the unemployed. Unemployed persons will be asked questions designed to obtain information on patterns of employment and unemployment in recent years, kinds of jobs held, whether the unemployed persons are willing to move to another area in order to get employment, and other work experience items. A recurring function of the Quarterly Household Survey will be the collection of statistics on expenditures for residential alterations and repairs. Statistics from earlier surveys indicate that these expenditures total close to $15 billion a year.

The Quarterly Household Survey will be conducted during the first ten days of each quarter in the 385 sampling areas used for the Census Bureau's monthly Current Population Survey. This procedure will enable the Bureau to utilize the services of skilled, experienced Current Population Survey interviewers, simplify

"CANCER PROGRESS YEAR"

About 173,000 Americans will be saved from cancer this year.

How Many More Could Be Saved?

About 87,000 cancer patients will probably die in 1962 who might have been saved by earlier and better treatment.

Over One Million Now Living —Cured

There are now 1,100,000 Americans, alive today, who have been cured of cancer. By "cured" we mean they are alive without evidence of the disease at least five years after diagnosis and treatment. An additional 700,000 cancer patients diagnosed and treated within the last five years will live to enter the ranks of those we call cured. This means there are actually 1,800,000 Americans cured of cancer, although 700,000 will not be formally counted as cured until they have completed the five years.

U. S. Cancer Deaths by Age In 1961 there were about 22,500 cancer deaths of patients aged 15 to 44. Cancer is the leading cause of death among women aged 30 to 54. Almost half of all cancer deaths last year were among persons under 65.

U. S. Cancer Deaths by Sex More men than women died of cancer last year. This has been true since 1949. The ratio in 1962 will be about 44 men to 46 women.

Cancer and Children

Last year cancer took the lives of more than 4000 children under 15 years of age. About half of them died of leukemia, which is a cancer of blood-forming tissue. More school children died of cancer than from any other disease. Today there are over 300,000 American children under 18 who have lost their fathers to cancer. Over 250,000 have lost their mothers.

When you give your time, your effort or your dollars to the American Cancer Society, you are making a good investment. It pays off in human lives saved.
